National Decree of the United States within a meaning of the Esp. age Laws, Title 18, U.S.  REPARED AND DISSEMINATED BY  CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY  Iran  National Decree of the United States within a meaning of the Esp. age Laws, Title 18, U.S. Secs. 793 and 794, the transission or revelation of which in any manner to an unathorized point son is prohibited by law.  REPORT NO.  25X1A		A-0-11-11		حصين	IIL BEECIA	L CONTROLS, IF A		affecting the
CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY  Iran  Dusiness Slump  Dusiness Slump  ACCUMENCE (My source)  NE ACCUMENCE (My source)  IT Supplements to report of the control	INFORMATION REPORT					National Decree of the United States within the meaning of the Lap rage Laws, Title 18, U.S.C
Business Slump    Description   Description	REPARED	AND DISSEMINATE	D BY
Business Slump  During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government tiself practically controls all export and import business; thether well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; the US are applied to purchases from the causes of the Buropean associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near huture; that a good deal of these montes are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the receast arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer claid. Separtments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessem, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block and their Iranian collaborators which prevent the sale of imports taprofit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is a corrupt in that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.   It is unchanged		CENTRAL INT	ELLIGENCE	AGENCY		son is prohibited by	law.
Business Slump  ACC ACQUIRED (By source)  OVE ACQUIRED (By source)  OV	OUNTRY	Iran				REPORT NO.		25X1A2
During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become benkrupt. A dozen or these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports receibly received show that the government occaving. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the moles from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessem, as to the kind end quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports staprofit by Iranian marchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  This unevaluated minimation is supported.	UBJECT			mary		DATE DISTRI	_
THE ACQUIRED (By source)  DATE OF INDORMATION (Date or detex, on or between which revents or conditions described in repart claimed)  1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as greats and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, mentfulated by agents of the Sterling block and their Iranian accllaborators which prevents the sale of imports stapporit by Iranian marchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and ones its includency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by hie people will not permit a long tenure, the government is no corrupt as soon and as much as possible.  It is possible		Business Slump	)	而門門		NO O PAGES
DURING COUNTRO (By source)  In a sumber of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the mear future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commercial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports dayrofit by Iranian marchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by hhe people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  In the possible intensity of your and provents and company and preport.				( av	PPA,	" [	RT #
DURICE  A MANUSCRIP (My source)  DURING the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government cost and consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the mean future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lace of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businesses a, so to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which filood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports apport to to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by hhe people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  This unevaluated micromation is supplied and and the property and market.  It is unevaluated micromation is supplied and and and and an arman disseminates in the pro	ACE ACQUIRE	ED (By source)				RES	PONSIVE TO
During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the mear future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of acder methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessem, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports tayrofft by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Racing that lack of support by his people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.   This unevaluated internation is supplied to the proper and marginal descention and the profit of the profit and the profit				· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the mear future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commercial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports dayrofit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and oves its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by hhe people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  INSURABLE ALEMANT.  INSURABLE ALEMANT.  INSURABLE ALEMANT.  INSURABLE ALEMANT.  INSURABLE ALEMANT.  INSURABLE ALEMANT	TE ACQUIRE						_
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Irandan merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation scrious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports tayrofit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  If the necessary of your analyses the people will not permit a long tenure, the government was allowed.		15 Jun	55 and ear	lier
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports tayrofit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  It is much warrant dissumination is supplied to the possible marrant dissumination is supplied to purport.								h.
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their heachmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commercial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports taprofit by Iranian marchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by his people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  If the possible intense of your analyses of your analyses.	JURCE
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports taproffit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  It is unevaluated information is supported as the possible intense of your analysis.	X1X6							•
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block, and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports taproffit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  It is unevaluated information is supported as the possible intense of your analysis.
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the mear future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports taproffit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  It is unevaluated information is supported as the possible intensit of your analysis.								$\mathcal{L}$
1. During the last few months there has been a slump in business and quite a number of Iranian merchants and importers have become bankrupt. A dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the mear future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports taproffit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  It is unevaluated information is supported as the possible intensit of your analysis.	(1)6							`
dozen of these cases are admitted by the government but the number is much larger. Reports recently received show that the government does not consider the situation serious, but the proofs they give are not convincing. Those well-informed of the causes of this depression believe that one reason is that the government itself practically controls all export and import business; that the monies from the oil revenue as well as grants and loans from the US are applied to purchases from England and from their European associates or allocated to projects not needed now or in the near future; that a good deal of these monies are appropriated by individual government leaders for their own purposes or by their henchmen, as proven by the recent arrest and conviction of a number of such agents currently reported in the Iranian press. Other reasons are the lack of modern methods in the economic and commer cial departments of government such as regular statistics on export and import trade intended to guide merchants and businessmen, as to the kind and quality of goods being imported as to current needs. This lack is responsible for large quantities of goods in oversupply, which flood the market.  2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manifulated by agents of the Sterling block and their Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by hhe people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  This unevaluated information is supposited.  This unevaluated information is supposited.  This unevaluated information is supposited.  The possible interest of your analyte the	(1/0							18
2. Another contributory factor is the arbitrary rate of exchange, manipulated by agents of the Sterling block and their Iranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports taprofit by Iranian marchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  It is unevaluated information is supposed A29 does not warrant dissemination in the possible interest of your analyteport.	as fr or by as cu of su me	grants and loa com their Europe in the near fu individual gov proven by the urrently reporte modern methods ach as regular s erchants and bus	as from the an associated the state of the true of true of true of the true of tru	US are appeared or allow a good deal ders for the stand communication and communication are export as to the key control of the key control or and control o	plied to posted to place to place to place the provincian of the commer cian and import ind and quantity and an	purchases from a projects not ne- e monies are ap- purposes or by f a number of sa reasons are the departments of trade intended uality of goods	England areded now propriated their hencuch agents alack of government of guide being	nd i chmen, i
by agents of the Sterling block and their Tranian collaborators which prevents the sale of imports taprofit by Iranian merchants. In the case of Iran, where corruption is unchecked, it is much worse than elsewhere. The reason the government is so corrupt is that it does not represent the people and owes its incumbency to foreign influence. Knowing that lack of support by the people will not permit a long tenure, the government tries to make profit from its position as soon and as much as possible.  1 IVPE ACT-DATE INFO-TFR-DATE AREA  This unevaluated information is suppose 10A29  does not warrant dissomination by report.	of	ported as to cu goods in overs	upply, which	. This la	ck is respendence ck is respect.	ponsible for la	rge quanti	ities
This unevaluated information is supplied to A29 does not warrant dissomination by report.	by pr	ragents of the revents the sale ! Iran, where co	Sterling bl of imports rruption is	ock, and the staprofit	eir Irania by Irania	an collaborator	which	n :
	Tr th le	me people and ow ack of support b	es its inc y hhe peopl e profit fr	so corrup umbency to e will not om its nos	t is that foreign : permit a ition as :	it does not remainfluence. Known long tenure, the	present wing that he govern-
	Th th la me	me people and ow ack of support b ent tries to mak	res its inc by the peopl te profit fr	so corrup umbency to e will not om its nos	t is that foreign: permit a ition as a  This uneva	it does not reinfluence. Know long tenure, the soon and as much soon and so much so muc	present wing that he govern- n as possi O-TFR-DATE	lble.
	Tr tr la me	me people and ow ack of support b ent tries to mak	res its inc by the peopl te profit fr	so corrup umbency to e will not om its pos	t is that foreign : permit a ition as a ition a ition as a ition a	it does not rejinfluence. Know long tenure, the soon and as much soon and so much soon and	present wing that he govern- n as possi O-TFR-DATE	ible.

LIMITED: Dissemination limited to the intelligence components, other offices producing MY Suments, and Raber chelons with liven mines. The disseminated in consultants, external projects or reserve personnel on short term active duty (excepting individuals who are normally fundaments) and CIA, AEC, FBI, State or Defense) unless the written permission of the originating office has been obtained through the Assistant Director for Collection and Dissemination.

NO DISSEM ABROAD